Description

Practical and elegant little occasional bench from the Roaring Twenties (1925) in mastic lacquered wood and covered with a pretty almond green satin linen with braids, it rests on four sturdy and developed fluted tapered legs and its belt of ribbons rolled up in a frieze punctuated in the corners at the top of the legs with rosettes in blooming flowers, the light side uprights accompanying the sausages on each side adding and giving the pretty final touch. It is undoubtedly a companion piece of furniture to put down a book, your legs or retie your laces; see the panel is wide. Aesthetic in more than one way, this charming little very convenient seat will be able to serve you with all the elegance that is its own because it is in very good condition...
