Description

Important ladies' watch from 1925 in platinum. This jewel watch takes up the "baguette" format, with rectangular lines specific to the Art Deco period, but in a version that is much more substantial in terms of its size. Its design with articulated elements, invisible when worn, allows it to fit the shape of the wrist while covering it widely, to highlight sophisticated jewelry work. This design offers a curved aesthetic that is recurrent on Art Deco pieces. The work, extremely refined, and its design made of palmettes are very representative of the Art Deco period. The exclusive presence of diamonds, old cut, size 8/8 and 16/16, corresponds fully to it. Its production, in platinum with finely pearled edges, its cutouts and its case chiseled on the edge with plant and floral motifs, are also revealing of its
