Description

Interesting and rare octagonal frame from the Roman context from the second half of the seventeenth century and containing a contemporary mirror.

The fascinating object is characterized by being composed of different materials: the frame is made of ebonized wood and the edges are carved in various carving styles, while the body of the frame features gilded bronze plaques decorated with a burin which frame and contain a oval marble inlay. Each plate includes a marble inlay of different types and different colours.

A bronze cymatium with phytoform decoration and containing a winged cherub has been applied to each side of the frame.
