Description

This bronze sculpture with a golden patina, inspired by the work of the Spanish sculptor Juan Clara (1875-1958), is a magnificent representation of childlike innocence. Juan Clara, famous for his many sculptures of children, was able to capture with remarkable finesse the expressions and postures of his young subjects. The work represents a young girl standing on a stool, slightly hiding behind her hands. The delicacy of the line and the attention to detail are evident in each curve and line of the sculpture. The golden patina adds a touch of warmth and luminosity, highlighting the subtleties of the bronze. This sculpture is a tribute to the purity and simplicity of childhood, recurring themes in Juan Clara's work. It perfectly embodies the spirit of the artist, who always sought to immortalize
