Description

This painting, an 18th-century copy of the famous masterpiece by Carlo Cignani (Bologna, May 15, 1628 - Forlì, September 6, 1719), measures 120x155 cm without the frame and is adorned with a magnificent gilded and carved frame, bringing the total dimensions to 160x197 cm. The artwork depicts the biblical moment when Isaac, blind and wrapped in sheets and blankets, blesses Jacob. Seated on the bed, Isaac places his hands on the head and hands of young Jacob, who is kneeling before him. To the left of the scene, Rebecca, also kneeling, encourages Jacob to deceive his father, placing a finger on her lips as a sign of silence. The application of color is meticulous and uniform, a distinctive feature of classical art, which lends depth and solemnity to the scene. The elaborate frame further enhances
