Member of a family with three children, Amédée Varin became an engraver along with each one of his siblings. In 1847, he started to engrave paintings from the famous Gallery Goupil along with his three brothers and soon developed his own authentic technique that distinguished him, referred to as the "style Varin". He received several medals for his works. The French museum "Musée d'Orbigny Bernon" in the city La Rochelle currently holds over 20 of his engravings.

All our old prints are offered in good condition. When necessary, they have been restored by a professional restorer.
