Description

Very Small Virgin and Child in Majesty, 16th century, Repoussé Copper Dinanderie This exceptional work of detail is a representation of the Virgin and Child in majesty, made in embossed copper and dating from the 16th century. Small in size but of great spiritual intensity, it embodies both the devotion and the artistic know-how of its time. Characteristics and Techniques Material: Spun copper, filled with lead to reinforce its strength. Technique: Brasswork, a noble art derived from the profession of boilermaker, consisting of shaping metals into sheets using hammers and other specific tools. Origin: Inspired by the traditions of Dinant (Belgium), cradle of this refined craftsmanship. Details: Exceptional work on details and finesse of execution, visible in the
