Description

Large Empire clock from the early 19th century decorated with a helmeted Minerva, a philosopher and the allegory of the arts. This clock is made of red marble and has a rich decoration of gilded and chiseled bronze of beautiful quality with its original chiseling. The whole is supported by a rectangular base joined by a laurel crown with the attributes of the Arts, on the sides a quiver of arrows, surrounded by a heart-shaped stripe. It rests on feet in the shape of owls. The movement is wire.
