Description

Impressionist Painter c1920 Portrait of Vladimir Illich Ulyanov, called Lenin (1870-1924).

Possibly at Gorki, seated on a transatlantic style long chair in fashion at the turn of the century, we can see him looking onto the horizon towards a future he wishes radiant. Still at this time a philosopher and an ideologue, he has made his mark on history. His intense stare is contrasted by the artist with the lightness of his Impressionist rendering of the flowers in the garden. A rapid and bold brushstroke details the fold of the clothing, giving place to a more realistic painting of the face which conveys this moment to posterity thanks to the precision in the features.

It is thus a painting in the spirit of the times,
