Description

This pair of mid-20th century Charles X style birdseye maple armchairs are a remarkable example of the elegance and craftsmanship of the period. The curved backs are decorated with rosewood scrolls, foliage and palmettes, adding a touch of sophistication and refinement. The openwork crossbar of the back features three cross-decorated elements, adding further visual interest and demonstrating the attention to detail. The crosier-shaped armrests join square seats, upholstered in a soft blue fabric, providing both comfort and aesthetics. The seats feature rosewood inlays at the front in the same spirit as the back patterns, creating a cohesive visual harmony. The whole rests on gently curved front legs and sabre-shaped rear legs, giving the armchairs stability and timeless elegance. These
