Description

Iranian wool gorjin, circa 1950. Very good condition.

The gorjin was originally used as a packsack intended to carry the personal belongings of nomads. Two techniques used: knotted stitches and kilim on the front forming raised bands and kilim on the reverse. In the life of nomads, satchels played an essential role. The aesthetics of these pieces confirm the special attention paid by weavers during their creations (colors, patterns).
Note: three fasteners on the reverse allow it to be fixed to the wall.
