Description

Two Delftware tulip vases in Cashmere palette, 19th century

A fine painted set of two polychrome tulip vases. The blue, red, and green colours together make the Cashmere palette. The vases are shaped like a heart, with two rows of a total of nine spouts. And with handles shaped like birds. With a pseudo mark for Lambertus van Eenhoorn of the Metale Pot workshop.

One of the vases has a professional restoration to the base.
