Description

Let yourself be seduced by this remarkable sword-cane of Asian origin, an object that is both refined and mysterious and bears witness to the craftsmanship of the 20th century. Discreetly hidden in a bamboo shaft, the blade is revealed when the pommel is separated from the cane, transforming this simple walking accessory into an elegant weapon.

Its handle, decorated with a finely worked metal ring, features delicate floral arabesques, testifying to the care taken in the smallest details. At the time, this type of sword-cane was a symbol of social status and was used as much for personal defense as to assert the elegance of its owner. The meticulously chiseled floral motifs evoke the influence of traditional Asian art, where nature
