Description

Bruno Zach (1891-1935) was an Austrian sculptor known for his ornate bronze figures. His works, often assigned to the Art Deco style, usually show elegant, dynamic depictions of women with a mixture of sensuality and movement. The bronze figure of a dancer described here bears the signature "Bruno Zach" and a foundry stamp, which indicates that it was originally made from his time.

Such dancer figures were characteristic of Zach, who depicted materials, postures and expression in his sculptures with great attention to detail. His works were often made in well-known foundries in Vienna and are still very popular with collectors today. The bronze figure of a dancer reflects Zach's talent for immortalizing movement
