Description

Copper engraving made on brown paper with manual rework in white paint giving a nocturnal aspect to the scene as in the moonlight. The crew arrived at its stopover, the horses were unharnessed and directed towards the stable of the relay. The passengers are still in the stagecoach with the luggage. The engraving is signed Horace VERNET (1789-1863). It is in good condition (reflections on the photos are due to the protective glass). The LXVI style mahogany frame is left with the engraving.
