A pair of antique Italian Angels, two Baroque polychrome-painted and carved giltwood torchères dating back to late 17th century and coming from an private villa of Siena, a Tuscan city in Central Italy.

This rare pair of hand-carved, painted and gilded Cembran pinewood sculptures represent two standing angels figures, with long curled hairs showing a deep carving and excellent gilding, holding a cornucopia, symbol of abundance and prosperity.

Both candelabra sculptures raising on stepped and squared armorial bases, with the brotherhood symbol, a kind of symbol of the Golgotha drawn in white tempera. They are also adorned with a blue and red polychrome cloth under a gilded robe.
