de Rôme in 1932 brought him international recognition. Appointed professor at the Berlin Art Academy, he was commissioned by the Reich to create numerous state monuments.

It seems that he never adhered to the racist ideology of National Socialism, but accepted the regime out of "opportunism and megalomania".

We owe him numerous interventions on behalf of persecuted artists, including Pablo Picasso, then a Communist.

After the war, he created busts of French artists including Jean Cocteau and Jean Marais, a bust of Egyptian President Anouar and a monument to Moroccan King Hassan II. He continued sculpting until his death in 1991.

His eulogy was delivered by writer Roger Peyrefitte.
