Description

This superb white porcelain terrine from the Pillivuyt factory, made in the first half of the 20th century, is an emblematic piece of French tableware. It takes the form of a pâté en croûte, decorated with a finely detailed hare's head with glass eyes, in a remarkable trompe-l'oeil. Designed for culinary use, it combines both aesthetics and functionality, allowing it to be served directly from the oven to the table. Pillivuyt, one of the oldest French porcelain brands, has been established in the heart of Berry for over 200 years. A true guardian of exceptional artisanal and industrial know-how, the factory was recognized as a "Living Heritage Company" in 2009. Building on this tradition, the brand continues today to promote excellence and the French art of living throughout the world. Length:
