fighting a dragon, all enhanced with gold.?

Wooden Tsuka, covered in shagreen.

Iron tsuba representing a bird of prey with brass eyes overlooking a Japanese macaque taking a bath in the Onsen, a natural hot spring, enhanced with copper and brass.

This scene probably refers to the legend that these birds were sent by the samurai to search for a piece of the sun, which, once melted in the snow, would provide the monkeys with a source of warmth.?

Menuki representing two brass dragons.?

Copper fuchi covered in shakudo, engraved with several leaves, probably maple.

Buffalo horn Kashira.

Copper seppa, signed.??

Very good condition.??
