Description

Iranian wool kurk* rug, cotton warp and weft, circa 1950. Very good condition.

City in central Iran, the production of kashan began during the Safavid dynasty (1501-1732) and particularly under the reign of Shah Abbas.

Superb Kashan rug with a traditional pattern on a plain red background (kafzadé) with nuances. This rug is a fine example of the mastery of the weavers of the city of Kashan. In the center, two sky blue and beige medallions are inserted into a navy blue medallion. Four spandrels, reminiscent of the central medallion, as well as borders with a 'herati' or 'samovari' (flower) pattern frame the field of the rug.
