Description

This blown glass vase, signed by Claude Morin and dated from the 1970s, stands out for its play of colors. The intense orange-red hue contrasts with black and white undulations that seem to float on the glass surface, creating a sense of movement. During the 1970s, glass artistry experienced a revival, blending traditional craftsmanship with aesthetic exploration. Morin embraced this dynamic by experimenting with transparency and light, giving this vase a presence that is both understated and vibrant.
