HISTORICAL CURIOSITIES:

Amphitrite had in various Greek cities the honor of worship together with the god of the sea, and was depicted as a queen, or on a sea chariot, or on marine animals.

Famous was the votive gift placed by Herodes

Atticus in the temple of Poseidon on the Isthmus of Corinth, where they were seen.

A beautiful legend told that Poseidon, wanting to take her as his wife, Amphitrite escaped from him by fleeing and took refuge in the depths of the sea, where a dolphin managed to kidnap her and take her to the god, who, out of gratitude, placed the dolphin among the stars.
