Description

Pair of 18th-century tobacco boxes in faïence, each with its own charm and carefully crafted decoration. These period pieces reflect the refinement and craftsmanship of their time.

The first box features a lively scene with characters in a pastoral setting. The colors are harmonious, with hand-painted details that add character to the piece. Its border is adorned with ornamental motifs that elegantly frame the composition.

The second, more slender, displays a pastoral design with a musician playing the lute in a natural landscape. The lid is decorated with delicate flowers that enhance the elegance of the piece. The overall design is simple yet
