Description

This Carrara marble bust, signed by Attilio Fagioli, depicts a young woman with a gentle and serene expression. Her finely sculpted face is framed by wavy hair subtly adorned with discreet flowers, and a long braid delicately rests upon her shoulder. The refinement of the carving is evident in the detailed rendering of flowers and drapery, conveying a sense of lightness and natural beauty. The alabaster, with its smooth surface and luminous tone, captures the light, highlighting the subtle contours of the face and decorative elements. The marble base, with its nuanced color and veined texture, provides visual contrast and balance to the piece. Crafted in the early 20th century, this sculpture is equally suitable for a collection or an interior seeking a touch of elegance and authenticity.
