Description

Rocking horse, first half of the twentieth century
Made of modeled and painted papier-mâché.

Base: Consisting of two lateral elements in shaped wood, which form the characteristic curve of the rocking horse. The stirrups are made of synthetic material with metal elements. A distinctive element is the turned wooden handle, positioned under the body of the horse. This handle facilitates the grip and allows other uses in addition to rocking

The presence of a depiction of a plane with parachutists on the side of the horse is an unusual and interesting element.
