Description

Plate with polychrome decoration on the theme of wolf hunting. In the center of the plate, an animated scene shows two hunting dogs running at full speed, their bodies stretched out and their legs outstretched, pursuing a fleeing wolf with its mouth half-open. The background represents a hilly landscape, punctuated by slender trees and a blue horizon, reinforcing the perspective and depth of the composition. A wide gold line frames the central scene. The marli (inner edge of the plate) is richly decorated with a deep midnight blue background, characteristic of the porcelains of the Darte factory in Paris. It is decorated with a golden floral frieze, alternating small stylized flowers and intertwined arabesques. A wide gold line on the border enhances the whole, emphasizing the elegance.

CONDITION, Period: EARLY 19TH CENTURY

This plate is part of the tradition of Parisian luxury porcelain from the early 19th century, where hunting was a privileged theme, particularly appreciated by the aristocracy and the imperial court. The quality of the decoration but especially the decoration of the rim of the plate demonstrates great artistic mastery, typical of prestigious Parisian Manufactures or workshops which allow us to attribute this plate without a doubt to the Darde Manufacture in PARIS.
