bordering on abstraction and a bouquet of flowers made 208,000 euros in 2022 Van GOGH had a revelation when he saw works by Monticelli at his brother Theo's house. He wrote "I owe everything to Monticelli, he who taught me the chromatism of colors." The painting that I am presenting to you is a very beautiful collector's work, extremely modern for the time, pure spots placed with precision (a harbinger of both impressionism, fauvism and abstraction) on wood left bare in places to give a background color.
