generally found in Iran. Ziegler rugs were designed with the Western market in mind and fit perfectly into almost any home. Based on a softer version of the Sultanabad design, their vegetable dye colors and simple yet striking pattern work well with modern neutral color palettes and contemporary or traditional furniture. The weaving of Zeigler rugs began in the Arak Provence, however, they are now manufactured throughout the Persian region. Most of the new Ziegler designs are made in Afghanistan and labeled Chobi (which translates to wood in Farsi, a reference to their natural color created by vegetable dye).
