Description

This bronze sculpture, signed Louis Fiot and dating from the 1930s, illustrates the elegance and dynamism characteristic of the Art Deco style. The seagull, captured in mid-flight, spreads its wings with fluidity and lightness, evoking both the power and grace of movement. The beautiful refined patina highlights the subtle details of the plumage and gives the work a remarkable visual depth. Placed on a stylized base evoking waves, this piece reflects Fiot's talent for capturing the essence of the natural world in a refined and expressive artistic form. Made by the foundry Susse Frères, this sculpture also demonstrates the exceptional know-how of this prestigious foundry, renowned for the quality of its bronze editions.
