Description

Allegory of the air. Glazed porcelain. Hispania porcelain, Spain, 20th century.
Glazed porcelain figure with touches of gold representing a half-naked child, with an old-fashioned hot air balloon and bellows, sitting on a base clearly reminiscent of the Rococo era on which we can read the text "El Aire", alluding to the allegory that the piece represents. This type of work is inspired by remarkable works of European manufacturers. The Porcelana Hispania factory has produced a series of quality pieces in this same line (animals, Rococo-influenced couples, etc.). -
Dimensions: 12x8x15 cm
