Description

The "Caribù" floor lamp, designed in 1972 by Lella Montecroci and Marco de Carli for Arrelam, is an iconic piece of Italian design from the 1970s.

Its functional and sculptural aesthetic is based on a chrome metal structure and a white lacquered aluminum reflector.

Its ingenious system allows for height adjustment as well as rotation of the lampshade, offering great flexibility of use. This modularity, characteristic of Italian design from the era, makes it a lamp well-suited for both workspaces and contemporary interiors. Its simple and sleek design, highlighted by clean lines and a slender silhouette, perfectly illustrates the rational and elegant approach of the Montecroci & De Carli
