Description

Early 20th century circa 1920/30 - More photos on request. The semi antique Persian tribal rug was made in the Persian village of Faradombbeh located in Bakhtiari. Measuring 337cmx213cm and made of wool on cotton weft around the early 20th century, it has a distinctive floral design with striking antique colours. Faradombbeh rugs originate their designs and colours from fabrics and textiles of the European renaissance period and for this reason their distinctive designs have become the hallmark of their rug weaves over the centuries. Condition wise it has uneven wear with minor flaws with an old repair and a small area of discolouration. Very decorative This is an ideal acquisition for those who love an antique rug
