

PROANTIC
LE PLUS BEAU CATALOGUE D'ANTIQUITES

Ottoman Ceremonial Dress In Embroidered Velvet, Richly Embroidered With Gold Threads, 19th Cent

1 850 EUR

Period : 19th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Linen

Width : 103 cm

Height : 133 cm

Description

Ottoman ceremonial dress in embroidered velvet, richly embroidered with gold threads

Late 19th / early 20th century

Museum piece

Magnificent Entari or ceremonial Caftan, testifying to the refinement and splendor of women's attire in the Ottoman Empire. This ceremonial garment, worn by women of the nobility or the imperial court, illustrates the exceptional know-how of Ottoman textile artisans.

Characteristics :

Origin : Ottoman Empire, Turkey Period: Late
19th century - Early 20th century

Dealer

Atelier 21

Antiques and décoration

Mobile : 0609457367

Samonac 33710

Material : Midnight blue silk velvet with some stains, luxuriously decorated with raised gold embroidery

Ornamentation : Stylized floral motifs, garlands, decorative chains and traditional Ottoman emblems with some pulled threads without major alteration of the structure.

Cut : Loose-fitting, half-sleeved, trapeze-shaped dress that could be worn over embroidered trousers (salvar)

Historical and stylistic context :

This type of dress was often worn on grand occasions: weddings, official ceremonies or palace parties. It is a typical example of Ottoman luxury textiles, influenced by cultural exchanges with Persia and Europe. The gold-plated metallic thread embroidery was a sign of high social status and ostentatious wealth.

Entari were usually worn with a belt made of chased metal or embroidered silk, and were part of the trousseau of young brides from aristocratic families.

Condition and preservation :

Very good overall condition for a piece of this period, solid

Beautiful patina of the velvet and embroidery, with some minor signs of wear consistent with age

Ideal for a private collection, a museum exhibition or a historical reenactment

Rare and precious piece - An exceptional testimony to Ottoman clothing heritage.

Dimensions :

46 cm shoulder width

133 cm height

103 cm width at the bottom

43 cm sleeve length

16 cm sleeve width

For any information, do not hesitate to contact us.