Description

Painting made with a knife by Jacques Pouchain, a French artist known for his work in painting and ceramics. His work oscillates between abstraction and figuration, characterized by dense textures and a subtly nuanced palette. This composition represents a landscape of the village of Poët-Laval, an emblematic place in the Drôme where the artist lived and worked. In the 1970s, Pouchain explored compositions where the material becomes essential, reflecting a research on light and structure. This period marks a turning point in his style, where the experimentation of impastos reinforces the dynamics of his works.
