The Glass Bead Torch Technique

The spinner uses solid glass rods, transparent or colored. Each rod is heated with a torch. First, in contact with the orange flame--the upper end of the torch--then toward its blue part, the hottest spot. When the glass begins to soften and become supple, the spinner begins their creative work.
Using precise, traditional techniques, they work the glass. They stretch, turn, shape, massage, and spin it, as desired. The final shape of the glass bead comes to life before their eyes! The shaping time varies depending on the complexity of their idea. The artisan must place their finished creation in the kiln to allow it to rest. Once the bead is removed from the kiln and cooled, it is removed from the mandrel. Then the glass spinner can add the final touches before use.
