Description

Dirkan Daderian, born in Beirut (Lebanon) on October 29, 1929, is a Lebanese abstract painter belonging to the New School of Paris. He produces abstract paintings revealing a strong mastery of composition: one can evoke an abstract impressionism, as they are constantly characterized by the juxtaposition of small touches of color separated by white and black interstices, placed in horizontal bands, according to alternating color registers, generally of "broken" tones, sometimes tending towards monochrome, and enter into a musical universe of textures, colors and shapes that encourages meditation. Work signed and dated 1961
