Description

Grille. Wrought iron. Spain, 17th century.
Wrought iron window grille with two smooth circular sections in the center, inserted between vertical bars. Between the two sections, a decoration of small discs and balustrade shapes (which add slight movement) faces the compositions to create harmony. The decorative details mentioned refer to 17th-century Baroque works made of this material: compare, for example, with the balconies of the Casa de Panadería in the Plaza Mayor of Madrid, or with Spanish pieces preserved in the Victoria and Albert Museum in London, a confessional grille from the Metropolitan Museum in New York dated 1629 (inv. 57.137.51) and another from the same museum made by the master Francisco González (inv. 56-234.12Ad). - Dimensions:
