Description

Painting, Oil on canvas, Flemish School, 18th Century
An 18th-century Flemish School painting depicting a lively genre scene by the seaside. A group of people is gathered around a table, enjoying oysters, while on the left, a woman prepares a meal over an open fire. On the right, a man accompanied by his dog observes the scene. This dynamic composition follows the tradition of Flemish genre painting, characterized by meticulous attention to detail and an atmosphere that is both realistic and warm. The interplay of light and the color palette evoke the great Flemish masters of the period, enhancing expressions and textures with remarkable finesse. The artwork is presented in an antique blackened and gilded wooden frame, emphasizing its character and authenticity.
