Description

A large bronze sculpture, signed on the base by the renowned artist M. Constant, dating from the late 19th century. This work of art depicts a standing man holding a pipe near his mouth. Dressed in a hat, a shirt with rolled-up sleeves, a vest, and an apron, the worker appears to be enjoying a moment of rest. The sculpture's meticulous details, from the folds of his clothing to the realistic expression on his face, attest to the artist's talent and mastery. The base of the statue mimics a rocky surface. This bronze sculpture is a rare piece due to its large size, the story it tells, and its quality of execution.

Maurice Constant Favre (1875-1919) was a French sculptor and engraver known for his bronze works. His creations were exhibited at the
