Description

Bulle-Clock bronze wall clock, electric clock made in France in the 1930s. Designed for industrial or institutional use, it operates thanks to a patented electromagnetic system, ensuring high precision for the time. The metal dial displays easily legible Arabic numerals, protected by a curved glass. The metal case has a sober finish, typical of industrial clocks of this period.

Bulle-Clock clocks are renowned for their innovative mechanism based on an electrically powered pendulum, providing regularity without manual intervention.
