Description

Hammered and riveted wrought iron sculpture by Michel Zadounaisky, circa 1940. The piece depicts a bird perched on a stylized and refined branch, entirely made without welding, characteristic of the artist's artisanal technique. Michel Zadounaisky (1903-1983), a famous ironworker, is renowned for his works combining wrought iron tradition and modernist aesthetics around the 1930s-1950s.
