Description

Price per unit, several available.Although reminiscent of Venini's design, these modernist Art Deco ceiling lights are from an earlier period, between 1930 and 1940.They are of high-quality craftsmanship, as evidenced by the slight dimensional variations of the glass parts, which contain small inclusions and fine bubbles, the drilling for their suspension, and the screwed assembly method of the structure.The brass structure supports 16cm triangular glass pendants around the perimeter.A circular diffuser made of thick, molded pressed glass with a relief decoration is located at the bottom, secured by a bronze piece.The sockets for both lights are Edison-style bayonet fittings made of brass and porcelain (easy to find Edison bulbs for every voltages in the world). The wiring is new, the
