Description

Iron corbels. 19th-20th centuries. Set of three iron corbels used in some notable homes, decorated with scrolls, lines, and other elements that could link the pieces to Neoclassicism, but which also have a slightly more modern feel. The polygonal finials located below the two volutes facing each other in the upper part recall certain elements of the Orient, while the composition can be compared to European traditions. Dimensions: 42x17x49 cm
