Description

Patinated bronze bust of Diana, goddess of the hunt, nature, fertility, and the moon in Roman mythology. She is depicted with her traditional attributes: a crescent moon on her head and a bow around her chest. The Belgian artist rejected the academic representation of the goddess in favor of an author's Art Nouveau style. Paris, Art Nouveau, circa 1900. Signature: "Van der Straeten"; circular cast mark with the coat of arms of Paris and the inscription Société des Bronzes de Paris. George van der Straeten (1856-1928) was a French sculptor of Belgian origin. From 1885, he exhibited annually at the Paris Salon. He specialized in bronze female busts. Height 67.5 cm. Very good condition, small scratches to the patina. Free shipping within the EU! I send parcels by insured mail (DPD or DHL). All items
