Description

Oil on canvas in the style of Jean François de Troy (1679-1752) representing an interior scene in the 18th century, we find the furnishings and decorations of the Louis XV period, with candle lighting, several protagonists are busy preparing the mistress of the house before the ball. Quality oil painting, made on canvas, mounted on panel during a restoration, the examination of the edge of the oval-shaped canvas indicates old nail holes, indicating that the painting was originally medallion-shaped and therefore not recut. Made by a follower of Jean François de Troy in the 19th century, this painting is the counterpart of the scene "after the ball" that we also offer for sale. These paintings are highlighted in beautiful wooden and gilded stucco frames in the Louis XV style, dating from the 20th century.
