Description

Tithe Stone - Period at least 18th century We offer you this rare square-shaped tithe stone with rounded sides, with carved grips in the corners to facilitate its handling. This stone measuring instrument was used during the collection of tithes, an ecclesiastical tax established by Charlemagne in 779 and maintained in France until the Revolution. Used to quantify the products collected or to control the containers for traders (pots, bushels, baskets), this stone acted as a standard, guaranteeing a fair measurement. Its patina and wear testify to its authenticity and its use over the centuries. This stone has remains of ornamental motifs carved on the four sides, including: - A fleur-de-lis,- A coat of arms, probably of noble or ecclesiastical origin,- A pattée style cross,- An even more eroded element
