Description

This wooden sculpture represents an African head carved with great realism and strong expressiveness. Here are some elements that can be observed: Material: It appears to be carved from a dense, dark wood, with beautiful natural grain that adds character to the piece. Solid palm wood Style and details: The facial features are powerful, with a marked forehead, prominent cheekbones and a well-defined mouth. The finely chiseled hair is reminiscent of traditional African braids. Possible origin: This type of sculpture is often associated with traditional African art, particularly the styles of the Yoruba (Nigeria), Baoulé (Ivory Coast) or Fang (Gabon) peoples. These peoples have a rich tradition of wooden sculptures representing human figures, often linked to ancestors or spirits. o Symbolism: Head
