Description

A remarkable bronze sculpture with a nuanced brown patina, depicting the Gallic chieftain Vercingetorix pointing toward the horizon while instructing his son. Clad in ancient-style warrior attire--complete with his characteristic winged helmet--the hero places his arm around the young man beside him in a pose that is both patriotic and solemn. This heroic composition, emblematic of the historical and patriotic artistic movement of the late 19th century, is distinguished by the quality of its chasing and the captivating expressions of the figures. Artist: Émile LAPORTE (1858-1907) Title: Pro Patria (or Vercingetorix and His Son) Material: Bronze with nuanced brown patina Edition: Early cast, signed and numbered 3016 on the base Dimensions: Height 43 cm × Width 26 cm ×
