Description

Handmade wool rug in good condition "circa 1940/50" Sarab Few regions specialize in producing rugs with a unique format. Sarab has done it. The city located in the northwest of the Iranian region, which is also its capital, produces one item in particular: Loafers. Equally interesting, they use camel hair or colored sheep wool for the background. This type of Persian rug has a longer lifespan than others, making them perfect rugs for long hallways. Thanks to the production of a durable wool pile and the Turkish knots used, these rugs are hard to beat. Their beautiful and unique design with colored camel hair in the background combines magnificently with any type of furniture. The figures are repeated hexagons, sometimes interspersed with diamonds.
