Description

Before, in all the beer-smelling bars there was an area where children were not allowed to pass. It was the vogelpick "track". It was not so much the few meters of flight of the darts that we feared, it was more often the state of sobriety of the staggering player... This target, which has seen others, is still made of compressed straw circled with metal and then painted (faded but original paint). It is accompanied by five real wooden darts and real feathers. We still sometimes find this fairground game in pubs in England but today it is electronic... without soul and is called "darts".
